Post-American Haiku

"American Haikus (short three-line poems intended to be completely packed with Void of Whole)" -- Jack Kerouac minutes above cars

all those years
dirty as a dentist

to occupy the lump-graph maybe the eye knows wake up to babbling sand while the commercial hisses cats

now and then a blizzard

ah the record player nineteen seventy-eight end of a world

at my desk
except students
foist or fist

Confucius was a constructed art why and who

recognition is where you're at

where heaven answers
so be it going on, on your own

then would the fish
rinse in mind
how it was and open

electricity so I unplug the little tiger slowly, always slowly

looking up at the wind I wrote the apron
two of them

talking again at dusk none of which has ever happened blossoms at dusk doing similar things for different reasons a morning glory and a goat rather than knocks hearing the river

no rhythm in a boat

we could count
that storm of socks
on one hand

the open itself
next time round
will be coordinated

dusk suddenly
but not this vivid twanging together

causes two things like that but I forget who

what combined with supper
through the gate

they were knots
for a while then students again

heard style as fire
you are sure
it will snow now

what I am making is there for anyone to notice

following the other order they harness
a constructed silence

weaving them on a tray
as if to sift
so, it is an orange

when the lights go out the steel rose ladles a train

interferes first got into the eye

logical hearing
doing the work of course the thought is open dizzy the thousand but they were seeing something

I walked up
and sat down
which lately is familiar interesting

in other words

as soon as the sky remembering the rhythm of the burning song

who says
syntax and billboards
makes jottings

weaving a fish
are not suspended sentences

no ideas
but in bare attention to fragments of things

no things

to fragments of writing

not every poem
however orderly lampposts pirouettes

see them lit up behind the rhythmic chords clapping

amid the sea stumbled upon this statement

not enough of a sea
to see
not enough time

enough time
as I said
the writing there

time enough to vacuum the origin there is nobody

the line
with you

most vivid arrangement

never change
as they say the salad of the sea

so much more of now
now
that it's in sequence

blotting mind
was not enough to follow the next syllable reduced to enough

where there is no
path dash
there will be no bubble nor foaming the path of the sentence of least resistance

there is not
as I said
there will be

practiced composition until it was unfamiliar

writing the sea and encountering the seam

becomes the center
gets in the head
like training

the experienced given

succinctly
excessive

shredding
the

counting the cars
----exciting

to walk
half to letter to think

running as if you were going
